5) Name, date of event, description and purpose of event.

"Open Yo Eyes" will be held on September 18, 2004. The is a family play that will take the audience on a fantastic and often confusing roller coaster ride of urban teenage life. The show's setting takes place in Big Momma's house and within this house her family, who by all standards is a dysfunctional one. The matriarch "Big Momma" has many revelations about her household and finds herself dealing with things such as domestic violence, a family member who discovers he is HIV positive and another who has issues with self expression. In dealing with the issues that are plaguing her household she maintains the importance of family and family values. These values transcend all socioeconomic, racial, and gender related barriers. These topics are dealt with very realistically in order to bring awareness to audience and that will hopefully cause them to examine their families and see if there's any similarities so that a discussion would begin and ultimately resolve those issues with a positive outcome.

8) Description of regional or local impact:

"Open Yo Eyes" will bring together young people from al walks of life. It will give them the opportunity to perform outside their immediate cultures and environments, thus, enhancing their self-esteem, confidence and fostering community cohesiveness. This project is in line with No Jive Production's philosophy of providing educational, creative and motivational programs that enhance the self-esteem and academic performances of the youth of South Florida.
